

Programme 2023

HSJ INTELLIGENCE LIVE

Delegates will be placed into groups and will rotate through each of the three HSJ presentations and Q&As throughout the afternoon.

12.00	Registration and Lunch
12.45	Delegates move into the Partnership Suite
13.00	Welcome and introduction from HSJ editor, Alastair McLellan: The NHS's big test 2023/24 will be the most testing year in the NHS's history. It must recover services in the face of an exhausted workforce and the return of financial pressures. How will the NHS England leadership and the government seek to steward the service through this time...and with a general election perhaps 18 months away, how should suppliers prepare themselves for a possible incoming Labour government? HSJ editor Alastair McLellan
13.20	Delegates move to Session 1 of 3 of HSJ presentations and Q&amp;A
13.25	1. The NHS's new masters Integrated Care Systems are almost a year old. They have developed in a myriad of ways – many unexpected, while the recent Hewitt review has once again shifted the power balance within the service. Many integrated care boards are now seeking to reconfigure care services to shift demand away from hospitals, while struggling to halt the slide in care quality and address the many problems posed by the service's long-term workforce shortages. HSJ deputy editor Dave West and senior workforce and care quality correspondent Annabelle Collins. 2. The 'must-do' priority; recovering elective and emergency care performance Reducing waiting times and waiting lists for hospital care is the NHS's most pressing priority. Across the NHS, acute trusts are investing millions in virtual wards, radical reconfiguration of outpatient departments, validation of waiting lists, the development of hot and cold sites and 'community diagnostics' - to name but a few initiatives – in the hope that it can hit a series of demanding and very high profile targets. Elective Care bureau chief James Illman, Diagnostics and Cancer bureau chief Ben Clover and correspondent for emergency care Matthew Discombe. 3. What the NHS is buying – how and why? Technology priorities and procurement reform The NHS has once again overhauled its technology strategy. It is now focussed on ensuring all providers meet acceptable standards and that the available money flows to the technology which will make the biggest difference, soonest to NHS

	performance. At the same time, procurement is also becoming more standardised and centralised, affecting all who trade with the NHS. HSJ editor Alastair McLellan, and senior insights correspondents Jack Serle.
14.25	Coffee Break
14.55	Session 2 of HSJ presentations and Q&amp;A
15.55	Delegates move to Session 3 of HSJ presentations and Q&amp;A
16.00	Session 3 of HSJ presentations and Q&amp;A
17.00	Networking Drinks Reception